Novel Plan.

New York, Oct. 24.—New York City is so replete with Wilson prosperity that the Eastern Women's Bureau of the Democratic National Committee could not find an available vacant store on a prominent thoroughfare in which to establish its headquarters. The women were in a quandary. The real estate agents could not help them.

Then somebody suggested a movable headquarters. The idea was adopted, and a van, decorated with flags and posters, now travels day and night over the principal thoroughfares of New York. Inside are tables, chairs, shelves for campaign literature, and accommodations for the women who are speaking to street crowds in behalf of the President.

"Mary's Lamb."

The first of a multitude of versions of "Mary's Lamb" was written by Sarah Josepha Hale, who was born in Newport, N. H., 128 years ago today. It was while she was editor of a women's magazine that Mrs. Hale wrote the immortal lines beginning, "Mary had a little lamb." A poem which has ever since been the delight of parodists. Mrs. Hale's maiden name was Buell. She married David Hale in 1813, and was left a widow in 1822, with five small children to support. She took up literary work; and for many years conducted the Ladies' Magazine in Boston and Godey's Lady's Book in Philadelphia. Besides having been a pioneer in the field of feminine journalism, she was an early and influential advocate of the higher education of women. She was the mother of Thanksgiving Day as a national holiday in the United States. For more than twenty years she steadily advocated the celebration of such a festival, and in 1864 President Lincoln established this holiday, which has been adopted by Canada, although observed on a different date. Mrs. Hale died in Philadelphia in 1879.

Governor Whitman appointed Samuel Strausburger as City Judge of New York in place of Judge Lynch.

The exports of merchandise from the port of New York for the week ended were valued at $5,923,835.

A Very Chic Model

Unusually chic is this little frock in dark blue velvet, trimmed with wool embroidery. A belt with trimming pieces at the sides holds in the fulness of the design at the waist.

As cooler weather approaches velvet takes the place of serge for the one-piece gown. This model can be inexpensively reproduced in dark blue velvet, trimmed with wool embroidery. There is an underbust of chiffon cloth, requiring about 2 1/3 yards 36-inch material. The fulness of the dress may be held in at the waist by a plain belt having trimming pieces at the sides, or a crush belt, in medium size the design requires 5/8 yard 36-inch velvet. Instead of a chiffon underbust, the dress may be made with an under-

HOW GIRLS EXPECT
SWEETHEARTS TO BE

I. O. A. writes: "This is in regard to how girls expect sweethearts to be. We two young girls keep company and are engaged to young men. They are jealous of two young men we care nothing for, nor give cause. They try to break our engagements. We go with the best. Instead of attending dances, we go to church. Our fiancés think they're a right to stay away, we not knowing where. If the weather is unpleasant, it's an excuse to pass evenings elsewhere. If they come at 8, 9 or 10, we should be in a pleasant mood to receive them. Please advise."

They know little about propriety if these are men's rules. Have a quiet talk with them as to your rights.

YOUNG MAN TREATING
HIS SWEETHEART

S. O. asks: "When a young man comes can't come ought he to give reasons? If it is impossible for him to fill his appointments, should he stay away, not letting her know? A girl positive she is in the right, yet shall she give in order to keep his company? Is it proper for him to quarrel with her about some fellow she meets at parties? Would a young man be jealous of a girl he has kept company with for two years (is engaged to) if he did not love her?"

"Sorry, as it's impossible to call," he should explain. Girl positive in the right should pleasantly, but firmly, state so. May add, "Let's drop the controversy." Jealousy does not have a claim on love. Often separates. So be careful to give no cause.

TRUE LOVER
CARING FOR THE FIRST

H. J. A. writes: "I am a young man past 18. I keep company with a young girl. I am deeply in love with her. She claims she loves me as devotedly. Another girl persists she has most affection for me. Cannot keep her away. Try honorably to show I don't care for her. How will I be enabled to stop her effusive declarations without breaking friendship? Love the first one better."

Your worth and ideas show your good principles. Avoid going where the second one is, knowing her way. Turn the conversation at once when romance is introduced. You will come out prosperous.

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE.

"I never speak the word farewell. But with an utterance faint and broken; A heartick yearning for the time When it should never more be spoken."

When a patient wife who has for years made a cent possess the buying power of two suddenly hears that her hard-working husband's salary has unexpectedly been raised her first exclamation instead of being, "Oh, I'm so glad, so thankful," is "It's too good to be true."

Why should anything that happens at first be too good to be true? It is at first to be too good to be true? It is usually the unexpected that happens. The good fortune we persistently pursue generally eludes us and we grasp the thorns more often than the flower. When we hear of a wayward youth turning over a new leaf for love's sake and vowing he has sown all his wild oats, intending ever after to walk the straight and narrow path, instead of remarking that the young fellow always had more good than bad in him, we are more apt to declare, and in all seriousness, "It sounds too good to be true."

When a habitual drunkard staggers home after a week's debauch and tells his family he met a Billy Sunday who induced him to sign a pledge that he would let liquor alone from that time on, his family choruses in a breath that it sounds too good to be true. They should give him the benefit of the doubt and casting a suspicion on the truth of his declaration.

People have even known to forget themselves so far as to exclaim, when they heard of the demise of dear old Aunt Mary or Uncle John and that a fortune had come to them in consequence, "Oh, surely that's too good to be true!" Whether they referred to the fate of the deceased or were in a transport of joy over the thought of the fortune, they forget to explain. If a young father is told over the telephone that he now has an heir, and the bouncing boy, his first delighted cry is: "A boy, eh? That sounds almost too good to be true!" Not much of a compliment to the baby girl who happens to accompany the boy, the mother thinks, but when he learns there's an addy reason for rejoicing, and that there's a twin girl as well, his words, "That sounds too good to be true," have a doubtful ring to them.

There's nothing that happens to good deserving people or is about to happen too good to be true. We have a queer way of expressing our joy when we put a doubt upon it.

and your king and your God. Aye, soldiers, you must not forget our good old God up there!"

"The greatest gain of our nation will be that it is won back, it is looking up to God; that it has realized that neither nations nor individuals can do without Him."

"Gentlemen, how fascinating and marvelously manifold is the personality of our great Lord. We must study it thoroughly, and we must never forget that we live with the Lord."

"Suppose Christ entered at this moment through yonder door. Could we look into His face? Could we welcome Him as those who have really and truly embraced His faith, or should we shrink from Him?"

"Going to church once a week does not make a man truly religious. We must make Jesus the ideal of our everyday life. We must determine to live according to His teaching. We must be true Christians."

"You must bring sharply before us the vision of God, you preachers of the Gospel, for it may be that God, as the Judge of mankind, is now passing through the world. You must represent Him and show Him to us."

WOMEN OF WEST
FERVID IN AID
OF PRESIDENTWm. J. Bryan Back from Pacific Is Enthusiastic
For Victory of Party

New York, Oct. 24.—William Jennings Bryan, who joined President Wilson in Pittsburgh on the President's way back from his trip to Chicago, predicted an overwhelming Democratic victory in November. Mr. Bryan was fresh from an extended speaking tour in behalf of Wilson and Marshall along the Pacific Coast and through the Mountain States and was brimful of enthusiasm. He said that from his observations throughout the West, he was confident that President Wilson would receive enough electoral votes to assure victory without reference to the way New York went, and that he expected the Democrats to gain four or possibly six Senators in the Mountain States.

"Without exception, I found that the audiences I addressed strongly approved President Wilson's Mexican policy," said Mr. Bryan. "The Federal Reserve Act is our most attractive achievement so far as the business men of the West are concerned, the farmers commend the President most heartily because of the Rural Credits Act, while the laboring classes have been infected with Wilson enthusiasm because of his success in bringing about the adoption of the eight-hour day."

"All of these elements," continued Mr. Bryan, "unite in warm approval of the foreign policies of the Administration, whereby peace has been preserved with our stricken neighbor Mexico, and America has been spared the horrors of participation in the European war. It is no idle thing to say that the West is literally aflame with sentiment for Wilson because of the successful and honorable manner in which he has preserved the peace. Nor is it idle to say that the West regards peace as the paramount issue of this campaign, and intends to vote accordingly."

Mr. Bryan said that he had indubitable evidence that the women of the West were even more fervid than the men in their approval of Mr. Wilson and that this knowledge was a factor in the confidence he felt concerning Democratic success in November.

"Mr. Hughes may say that he is a man of peace," said Mr. Bryan, "but the warlike implications of his speech, and of the utterances of his chief supporters are so clear that any man can grasp them."

Mr. Bryan was asked if he thought Col. Roosevelt's speeches were "aiding the campaign."

"Yes, Col. Roosevelt is aiding the campaign," he replied. "He has been of great assistance in arousing public support of the President's foreign policy. He has made a deep impression—against Mr. Hughes the hero of the blind alley. The Republicans have made all of the mistakes the Democrats could have wished them to make."

THE SPRING OF PERPETUAL YOUTH

was what the Spanish explorer sought in Florida. Youth cannot be perpetual, but with health a man or woman can retain youthful looks till the near approach of actual old age. If a woman is dragging wearily along oppressed by some woman's ailment, she may expect a return of youthful beauty and vivacity by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Adv.

THE QUEEN WHO WOULD NOT BE LEGLESS

"The Queen of Spain has no legs," according to the old Spanish proverb, but Queen Victoria, the English spouse of King Alfonso, has effectively disproved this old story by actively participating in sports and pastimes which require the use of her noble limbs. At first this was very shocking to Spaniards, who are a conservative people, but they have gradually become accustomed to their Queen's eccentricities and will celebrate her 29th birthday today with great enthusiasm.

The odd proverb which imputes to Spanish queens an absence of legs had its origin several centuries ago. At the marriage of a Spanish monarch the people of a certain community devoted to the manufacture of hosiery sent as a gift to the bride several pairs of silk stockings. The monarch was shocked at what he considered the indecency of this gift, and the stockings were returned with the curt message, "The Queen of Spain has no legs."

This passed into a proverb, but its origin was soon forgotten, and later generations construed it to mean that the Queen, to maintain her dignity, must lead a sedate and sedentary life, constantly surrounded by those whose duty it was to save her every unnecessary step. "It was held that it was indecorous in a queen to engage in any pastime or occupation requiring physical activity. Former queens of Spain, if asked how they passed the time, might have replied in the language of the rural storekeeper, 'Sometimes we jest set and think, and sometimes we jest set.'"

Queen Victoria, having been reared as a sport-loving English girl, overturned precedent and astounded the Spaniards by doing things which no other Spanish queen had ever dreamed of doing.

While the Germans, through an army of paid and volunteer agents, have carried on an active propaganda in Spain, and have converted many Spaniards into Teuton sympathizers, they have more than met their match in Queen Victoria, whose sympathy with the Allies is by no means secret. King Alfonso has always been fond of England and the English, but if he had shown any tendency to waver toward the German side of the controversy he would doubtless have been brought up with a sharp turn by his wife-by methods which every married man knows.

TODAY'S POEM

WITH UKELELE OBLIGATO.
She lies across the way from me
And ere the day is well begun,
She starts a song of Walkiki—
That "cutest wicky-wacky" one.

And when with half a million more,
I take the tube to work and back,
The wheels, above the subway's roar,
Go "wicky-wacky" on the track.

She plays and sings all night and day
Of Hula-Hula maids that dance,
And, where Beau Nash cannot say
nay,
The men wear grass instead of pants.

Oh Lord transport to Walkiki
All people who are prone to rave
About that beach, wherever it be,
And drown 'em in a tidal wave.

CORNER FOR COOKS

SWEET PICKLES.

Melons, peaches, plums, apples and pears are the fruits par excellence for the sweet pickle. They are all prepared by the same rule. Firm, ripe fruit is selected. Red gages and blue damsons are as good pickling plums as we have. A rich yellow peach is the best of its kind for pickles. They ought to be ripe; green fruit does not make richly flavored pickles. A Seckel pear makes an excellent pickle; so does any small tart apple. Use seven pounds of fruit to a pint of vinegar and four pounds of sugar; stick a whole clove in each peach, apple or pear. Use about an ounce of cloves to seven pounds of plums; this fruit is so small that it would not do to put a clove in every individual specimen.

Make a syrup of the vinegar and sugar; stick a whole clove in each peach, apple or pear. Use about an ounce of cloves to seven pounds of plums; this fruit is so small that it would not do to put a clove in every individual specimen. Just before taking it up add two ounces of cinnamon to every seven pounds of fruit. In the case of peaches and plums, this, with cinnamon and cloves, is an improvement to add sliced lemon and ginger root, using one lemon and two ounces of ginger to every seven pounds of fruit. An ounce of mace, if desired, may be added.

BAKED EGGPLANT.

Peel the plant and boil it whole in salted water until tender enough to pierce with silver fork. Drain and wash, adding butter, salt and pepper and two tablespoons of bread crumbs and a teaspoon of scraped onion. When cool beat one egg into the mixture, put in baking pan, cover the top with bread crumbs and bits of butter, and bake about half an hour in oven hot enough to brown the crumbs. We are very fond of this and got the recipe from a famous chef.

LIMA BEANS, FRENCH STYLE.

Shell the beans and cook them until tender in boiling salted water to which one teaspoon of sugar has been added. Drain, add one tablespoon of butter, season with pepper and salt and turn into a heated dish. Beat the yolk of one egg and add the half cup of water in which the beans were cooked, stir over boiling water until thickened, pour the sauce over the beans and serve at once.

TOMATO JELLY SALAD.

To the contents of a can of tomatoes add a pinch of salt and a pinch of nutmeg. Half a chopped onion, a bay leaf, 1 teaspoon of brown sugar, 1-4 teaspoon of salt and a little cayenne pepper; simmer slowly, pouring in a little cold water if it becomes too thick, and strain through a pure sieve, stirring into each pint of liquid a scant tablespoon of gelatin that has been dissolved in 1-2 cup of hot water; turn into small ring molds. When cold and firm, place in nests of with mayonnaise and garnish with tiny stuffed olives.

BEET SALAD.

Boil good-sized beets until tender, remove the centers, cool, then scoop out the centers and fill with chopped cabbage moistened with mayonnaise or boiled dressing. Serve on lettuce leaves or surround with a wreath of watercress.

ABOUT THE WAR.

This cruel war in Europe now,
How dreadful it must be,
When rulers for supremacy,
They fight on land and sea.

In August Nineteen Fourteen,
This cruel war began,
What a dreadful havoc it has wrought
Upon the life of man.

Many a gallant soldier,
Has left his kindred dear,
To answer to his country's call,
Without either dread or fear.

But alas, those noble heroes,
They ne'er return more,
They have died upon the battlefield
As thousands did before.

And when this war is over,
It matters not to those,
For they have fallen victims,
And are now in death's report.

Think of their loving families,
That now are left alone,
They must labor for a livelihood,
Where ever they may roam.

Don't you think it is a cruel shame,
That all those lives are lost,
For the ambitions of a few,
They had to pay the cost.

If they want this wicked war to end,
It will end without a doubt,
If they will put the rulers at the front
And let them fight it out.

If they had only done so when
The war it first began,
Think of all the lives and property
Just reckoned, if you can.

I hope God's anger is appeased,
And that this cruel war will cease,
May we forever in this world,
Have everlasting peace.

Those poor souls that were called away
God grant them peace and rest,
May they forever enjoy his presence,
In the company of the blessed.
